HEARD ON THE STREET

Herb— There are an awful lot of girls who don't want to get married.
She— How do you know?
Herb— I've asked them.

Motor Salesman— Yes, sir, of all our cars, this is the one we best understand and justified in pushing.

Prospective Customer— That's no good to me. I want one to ride in.

"The house stick," said the earthquake victim. "The cups and saucers flew all over the place and—"

"Great Scott!" exclaimed a little man in the corner. "That reminds me, I forgot to post my wife's letter."

Guest (after dinner)— And don't you help your mamma with the dishes when she has company?

Willie— I don't help her wash them, but I help her count the spoons after the company is gone.

stretch. The owner said it was Mary Ann and the trainer said the same. It was their story and they stuck to it. The investigation grew on but it reached the courts. The same testimony was given and it was restored to good standing. But the judges were not satisfied and were the stewards and the investigation continued for many months afterwards without results.

Now for the inside of what happened and how they got away with it. After Amityville was switched for Mary Ann the night before the race, Mary Ann was taken to a barn about a mile away from the track. When the bugle sounded for the post, a signal was given to the man on the outside who telephoned the barn where Mary Ann was quartered. She was brought out and a good sized bet was placed on her back. Then when the field was sent away by the starter, word was flashed to the place where Mary Ann stood ready and she started to run towards the track during the time the race was actually being run. By the time Mary Ann arrived at the race was over and she was ready to be switched into her own barn to take the place of Amityville, all wet and hooded in and has not been seen or heard of since. When the judges sent for Mary Ann, she had all the appearance of having just come out of the race. This is what really stumped the judges.

Zeigler is well known by a lot of the Calgary fans.

Why are you angry with Billie knowing?
He promised not to kiss me and he kept his word.

Her car had broken down on the road opposite a field where a farmer was plowing with a four horse team. The farmer came over and offered to pull the car to the nearest garage with his team.

"I appreciate your kind offer, more than I can tell you," the lady in distress told the farmer. "But unfortunately, you could load 12 more horses. You are, in fact, a 14-horsepower motor."

"Ah," said the village butcher, enthusiastically describing a new product. "She is a real lady. She doesn't know one cut or meat from another, nor veal from mutton."

Teacher— When did broadcast news start?

Willie— Please teacher, my uncle says when the first secret was told to me, I was in front."

Young lady was attending her first ball game. The house team was doing well. The day, and for a time she patiently endured her husband's transports and his explanations. But when, amid the cheering, having crowd he sprung upon the seat, waving his new straw hat three times around his head and then said, "I've got it! I've got it!" Mrs. Scott exclaimed:

"What on earth's the matter John?"

"Why, dearie," he answered, as soon as he could get his breath, "didn't you see the fiddler catch the ball?"

"Of course," said young Mrs. Scott, disgustedly. "I thought that was what he was out there for."

One Scotchman complained that he had a ringing in his head.

"Is he the cause of that?" asked his worthy cronies. "It's because it's empty."

"And have ye never a ringing in your head?"

"No, never."

"Is because it's crackit."

Dora had just returned from Sunday school, where she had been for the first time.

"What did my little daughter learn this morning?" asked the fond father.

"That I am a child of Satan," was the beaming reply.

"What have you ever your wife that she doesn't yell at you all the time, like she used to?"

"She said she found it was making Fish nervous."

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER
CROP PRICE GUARANTY

Take advantage of this offer . . .
Get the new equipment you need to reduce your production costs

Many farmers who need new machines for the economical production of their crops have been reluctant to buy them because of uncertainty as to the prices they will receive later in the year for these farm products.

In order to meet this situation, the International Harvester Company of Canada, Ltd., offers to farmers purchasing machines after this date, a definite price guaranty on wheat based on 77 cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern at Winnipeg, applying to a liberal portion of the purchase price of the machine. If the market price for wheat does not reach the guaranteed price at the time payment becomes due on notes given and maturing this year, the purchaser of machines under the plan will receive a credit equal to the difference.

Any farmer in Canada, regardless of where he lives or what he raises, can purchase McCormick-Deering farm machines under the terms of this offer.

This is your chance to replace wornout and obsolete equipment on a favorable price basis. Let us explain the details of this remarkable plan and tell you just how to take advantage of it in equipping your farm with the new cost-reducing machines you need at a real saving.

ROOSEVELT DECISIVELY WINS THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION

Franklin D. Roosevelt's decisive victory in the Democratic National Convention foreshadows a political struggle which will be costly to the nation, says the Winnipeg Free Press. The forecasts of the political experts were verified by the outcome of the convention. A combination of southern and western Democrats wrested control from Raskob-Smith-Jones combination, behind which stood eastern conservative business interests; and nominated for president one who has been in recent months obtaining these interests by the expression of views regarded by them as unduly radical. It was Governor Roosevelt's speech some three months ago in which he made reference to the "forty-eight man," ignored in the present choice of things which led directly to Alfred E. Smith entering the field against him as the candidate of the stand-past elements in the party and of Triunfante Hall. The contest between these two old political cronies has been bitter and determined. Though Roosevelt had made the nomination speech for Smith, the "happy warrior," as he termed him, in 1924 and 1928, and had stood for the governorship of New York in 1928 in order to help the Smith candidature, Roosevelt's candidature was persistent and virulent; apparently for the reason that Roosevelt had become, by adoption, the candidate of the wing of the party which regarded itself as the custodian of the Wilson traditions. Though W. G. McAdoo the son-in-law of Wilson, who led this section of the party in the desperate duel with Smith in 1924 was not openly in the Roosevelt movement he was not far away from it; and it was his delivery of the votes of the California and Texas delegations after they had given complimentary votes to John N. Garner, in 1928, which started the landslide for Roosevelt on the fifth ballot. Embittered Democratic critics of Roosevelt, like Walter Lippman, senior editor of the New York World, have been denying that Roosevelt has any qualities except those of a skilful politician. He has been limited to the radical and progressive forces, they claim, because he saw in this a road to the presidential nomination; becoming their leader he is "in fact their prisoner," to quote Lippman. Whether this is true or not, it does not affect the significance of the Chicago performance. The Democratic party has been captured by the radical elements of the party and is going to fight the presidential election on five issues in direct conflict with the Republican standard policies. The speeches in the Convention and in particular the address following the nomination by ex-Senator Reed of Missouri, calling for harmony, leave no doubt as to the intention of the Democrats to challenge the Hoover policies at every point and to offer alternatives directed to very different ends. The definite emergence of a left-wing political party in the country which for ten years has been the model of contented stability and order, the event of first class importance, not only to the United States, but to the world.

THE INDUSTRIAL STABILITY OF GREAT BRITAIN

In spite of the dire predictions concerning the future of Great Britain, the record of British industrial production during the post war period is one showing greater stability than that of any other country, says the Winnipeg Free Press Monthly Letter for July. For the past ten years there has been an undue amount of unemployment, but the volume of employment increased during the depression by a much less proportionate amount than that in most other countries. The record of the newer industries, for which there are no statistical indices available, is said to be better than that of the older basic industries, but even the latter records are relatively favourable when compared with production in other countries. When world prices began to improve and world trade takes an upward turn, British industry will find itself well prepared to take advantage of the improved demand in foreign markets. There is a widespread feeling that British stability and perseverance in the face of the undue expansion and deflation of the past ten years will restore Great Britain to world leadership in both finance and in industry.

Following Great Britain's suspension of gold shipments, causing rising prices, expanding business, decreased unemployment and renewed confidence. The continued decline of commodity prices in other countries, together with the tightening of money within the country, put a damper upon this expansion. The restriction of internal credit proved sufficiently stringent to bring about a decline in internal commodity prices and a rise in the exchange value of the pound. It eventually became necessary to pay foreign exchange on a scale to arrest the rise in sterling quotations and to prevent the loss of those advantages which had accrued to Great Britain by the suspension of gold payments. With these developments came a recession in that portion of the country that had been attending upon increased business activity. In June the announcement was made that British purchases of gold were to be used as a base for the expansion of internal credit. This announcement was greeted with very general enthusiasm. The credit structure of the country is sound and expansion of primary credit will be quickly reflected in the proportional increase in the loans and deposits of the banks. This credit policy will also tend to reinforce the effectiveness of the effort of the Federal System to expand credit.

The proof of the statements made above as to the stability of the production of British industry is indicated in the industrial indices of the London and Cambridge Service and those of the Board of Trade. The London and Cambridge index of industrial production, with a base of 100 in 1924, reached a high point of only 116.2 in 1929 and fell to 92.1 in 1931. In the United States, the composite index of industrial production, compiled by Standard Statistics, with a base of 100 in January, 1923, rose to 124.7 in the year 1929 and fell to 81.7 in 1931. It is now down to 69, while reports from Great Britain seem to indicate that the index of industrial production for 1932 will remain at a level between 95 and 100. A recent table shows two sets of indices for the years 1929-1931, with latest quarterly index numbers as available. They are not the same as those mentioned above, but they do bear out the same conclusion. It also contains a number of the subordinate series of which the general index is composed. It is of interest to note, for instance, the comparative stability of the coal and textile industries in Great Britain. In view of the widespread statements that these British industries have been losing so much ground in each industry, except shipbuilding and chemicals, the proportionate decline is overwhelmingly greater in the United States than in Great Britain.

In view of the turn of events which is tending to make British tariff policy an instrument for the expansion of British export industries, the stability maintained under the unfavorable conditions of the past ten years takes on added significance. While the deflationary policy which brought the pound back to par in 1925 prevented an expansion of industry which might have absorbed a larger number of the unemployed, it also prevented Great Britain from indulging in those excesses which are characteristic of unusual prosperity. With the depression, unemployment more than doubled in Great Britain but the number of these entirely unemployed increased by about 1,200,000, whereas it increased by about 10,000,000 in the United States. Recent months have shown a steady decline in unemployment and this would seem to indicate a corresponding improvement in purchasing power and business activity. The feeling is general that Great Britain has turned the corner. In a world in need of restoration of confidence, the turn for the better in Great Britain is an event which the rest of the world will attach great importance.

DEBTS QUADRUPLED
BY NINE PROVINCES

Enormous increase in Eleven Years Revealed at Ottawa.
Ottawa—The bonded debt of all Provinces in the Dominion rose from $218,870,927 in 1916 to $919,142,903 in 1926, according to a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.
The 1926 figures, just compiled, show Ontario had the greatest debt, with $289,821,241; Alberta second with $106,585,290; and B. C. third with $106,585,290. Quebec, second in population was fourth in bonded debt, with $76,641,161; Saskatchewan $72,641,161; Nova Scotia $55,182,480; New Brunswick $41,211,696; and Prince Edward Island $23,229,000.
The carrying charge of this debt involved considerable yearly expenditure out of revenue, and the interest payments by each Province on its bonded debt for the fiscal year ended in 1926 were as follows: Ontario, $18,467,841; British Columbia, $4,031,829; Manitoba $3,907,658; Alberta $3,658,692; Quebec $2,731,285; Saskatchewan $2,175,610; New Brunswick $2,013,889; Nova Scotia $1,840,118; Prince Edward Island $148,137.

Splendid Empire Achievements

An enterprising Sydney, N.S.W., newspaper, in order to convey to its readers the magnitude of the huge new Harbor Bridge, printed the composite picture shown above for the enlightenment of its readers.

Thrilled by descriptive stories of the new Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain" that appeared in Australian papers when that giant liner was tied on its maiden voyage last year by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Australians have taken as proud an interest in the "Empress of Britain" as Canadians and the "Empire Achievements" paid tribute to the enter prize of the Dominion and the Commonwealth. Underneath was the legend, "Sydney Harbor Bridge, opened March, 1932. Length of Arch Span 1,650 feet, breadth 160 feet, weight of arch structure 58,000 tons. "Empress of Britain" in service May 1931, length 760 feet 6 inches, breadth 97 1/2 feet, gross registered tonnage 42,500.

The "Empress of Britain" set her voyage from Canada June 16th, 1932, justified Australia's faith in her as an Empire achievement by creating the magnificent new record, Father Point to Cherbourg, in four days, seven hours, 58 minutes. 402.
